

About the Courses

The M.A. programmes offer courses keeping in mind the interdisciplinary nature of International Relations. The uniqueness of these programmes lies in their relevance to contemporary issues. The endeavour is to keep them dynamic and relevant at all times. Introduction of the Choice Based Credit System (CBCS) has further enhanced the interdisciplinary learning of students, whereby they can take courses from other departments to enhance their knowledge, skills and employability.

The courses encompass diverse fields of study. Areas of study include international relations, democracy and politics in South Asia, peace and conflict studies, gender and violence, ethnic conflicts and peace processes, diplomacy, political economy of conflicts, environmental security, foreign policy, conflict resolution, international law etc.
