An outreach program was held at IUST in which students of Tyndale Biscoe School Srinagar visited CIED IUST Foundation.

Prof. Parvez A. Mir, Director of the Centre for Innovation and Entrepreneurial Development (CIED) at IUST Foundation, engaged with students to provide an insightful overview of the department and its objectives. He highlighted CIED's commitment to enhancing educational opportunities and addressing the unique needs of students through diverse outreach programs.

Prof. Parvez A. Mir's session was a great opportunity for students to learn more about the role and objectives of the Centre for Innovation and Entrepreneurial Development (CIED) at IUST Foundation. By emphasizing the department's commitment to expanding educational opportunities and meeting the specific needs of students through various outreach programs, Prof. Mir likely encouraged students to explore the resources available to them.

This could also signify an effort to empower students to develop entrepreneurial skills, innovate, and contribute to the local or global community. It might be interesting to hear more about the specific programs or initiatives CIED is offering to foster this kind of growth and how students can get involved.

The visit was not only informative but also highly empowering for female students, offering them tailored guidance and resources to help them explore careers in innovation and entrepreneurship. By focusing on these fields, the program likely aimed to break down barriers and encourage women to pursue careers that have historically been underrepresented for them, while fostering a sense of community and support.
